

EMPLOYMENT ASSISTANCE

Once students have obtained their CDL, job placement efforts can be completed. We use the word completed because, oftentimes, job offers are received prior to finishing-up the program. Naturally, any offer would depend upon successfully passing the CDL test.

Those who choose cross-country (OTR) jobs are offered employment with carriers who place them with driver trainers for 3-8 weeks of supervised on-the-job training.

After that, driver's are assigned their own tractor and begin driving solo. Rider programs for spouse and others are common.

Also, many of these same carriers will make the payments on student loans while you work for them. For those students who must pay part of the cost of tuition and registration, when the student loan has been repaid, you can be reimbursed, over and above your weekly paycheck, for the part that you were required to pay.

PREREQUISITES

Requirements for this program are that you are at least 21 years of age, have completed high school or have a GED, are in reasonably good health and, have a good driving record within the past three years.

Those who enjoy driving, like to travel, want to see the country and, who want to be away from home for 14-21 days at a time can easily expect to make well above average income ($30,000-35,000 with only one year's experience) with benefits.

Those who want to stay closer to home can also expect to make a good and steady living with a commercial drivers license.

Opportunities in this career field abound for those who meet the qualifications. A huge nationwide shortage of CDL drivers makes this a wise career choice which will continue to be a bright spot on the employment horizon for quite some time into the future.
